

Each router floods a description of its own links. Every router therefore holds the same map — and then computes its own best path across it. Nobody is told what their routes are.